Alright guys, I'm taking on movement here, I'm going for the scissor sweep, he shut it down, I'm coming in here, I'm going for the brush, he shuts it down, now I bring my knee into his ribs from here. From here, I'm loading him up on my foot and I put my ankles together. The reason this is, is that now he can't collapse me near as well and it makes it really, really hard for him to get a base and I can kind of decide when I want to take him over. Now, I take my leg, I come over here, I put my knees, or my feet inside of his thighs, now I can go to either side. So he goes to try to escape and I just slide over to side mount. The same thing from the other side guys, I'm bringing my hips out, I've got my knee here, the scissor sweep doesn't work, I come around, I brush, I miss it, so I'm reaching up here, I've got my ankles together, I'm pushing my knee into his ribs right there, I've got my foot that's really, really extended there, and now I'm controlling the back of the elbow, I come up, and I slide over to mount, I'm not quite in mount because I haven't put my hooks in yet, and I slide over and I finish on side mount.
