All right guys so now we're gonna start work through the reaction from our opponent. From shin to shin guard there's many different ways how my opponent reacts and which technique that I'm doing uh there's a different reaction from him. I need to have answer for all of them like I explained before. Let's go for this one here. So the ankle pick one would be the reaction when you try to push it up. You don't want to give the sleeve, you don't want to give anything. I need to grab something the belt whatever to make him step back step forward go for ankle pick. For this one here I'm pulling him but he placed he managed to place the hand on the ground. I'm gonna keep pulling the collar down the whole time then I'm gonna let it go and hold the sleeve and then the moment he tried to go back I'm gonna push his arm between his legs. So I have the hook with my left leg shin to shin hold the sleeve and the lapel at the same time. How you're gonna finish this sweep is very simple. It's very similar to butterfly guard. Just gonna shift my hip under and sweep him to my right hand side. So I'm gonna shift under very fast and then we're gonna you're gonna end up holding the sleeve and the lapel one more time. So I'm holding here the position as I mentioned before I will always try to avoid him do the back step so I'm holding like that and lead my way on this side. Try to back step now Will. So I'm always forcing him to stay in the side that I want to apply the technique. Okay if I stay in a neutral scenario here he can do a long step back and then get away of this. Won't be much with this one here because I can trap that would be the back just back leg and then push my back to the ground and I cannot stop there because my left arm is busy on the lapel. So how I avoid this is all about weight distribution. I'm here now try to do the same thing. Stay here okay so I gotta pull the collar and elevate the shin to shin hand on the ground hold shift and go for the sweep one more time. Few details on this technique here. When I'm holding the sleeve he will try to create a lot of tension try to push it up. I really need to drive my hips in and pull his knee close to my chest because he will bend his leg doing that a lot and this will give him a lot of hook to make my hook active and throw him to the side. If he's in this stance here it becomes really hard because I'm kind of a little bit far from his leg I need to get into him. Okay see now this is the scenario that I want and I'll just complete this sweep. Extending the leg and finish this but the only difference will be only one goal we will not stop like that. Pull the collar down hold the sleeve I'm gonna try to push it up shift and then go for the sweep.
