

Metadata: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=QSj9F5Z0jyo>

Alright guys for the final submission of this instructional I'm going to show you guys a scorpion lock from the back. So my opponent is going to be a bit more forward and I'm going to be glued to his back right. Again seatbelt position and the cool thing about the submission is that I don't need to go out anymore. The submission starts with active hooks in and I go for the rear naked choke to get a reaction from him. Usually when I go for it you see this happens. He's trying to hold on to prevent him from getting the rear, from me getting the rear naked choke. I see this as a chicken wing right. Chickens do this motion so I'm gonna be with my knee on the inside and lift it up and put my foot onto his hip. When he tries to push it back down he's pushing against his own body so it doesn't make any sense anymore. From here I still have the threat of the rear naked choke but exactly this is what I want him to hold on to. I'm not gonna go from the inside to the outside but from the outside to the inside. I'm gonna go all the way arm deep, turn, hold on and from here I can release this by going all the way in. Doesn't matter I stay on the back also I can also do it from here. I'm gonna go up to get the submission. So one more time. I'm on his back right. Hug very tightly. I don't need to go outside. Active hooks and from here I'm gonna go for the rear naked choke. He's defending. This is the reaction you always get. You're not nine times out of ten you get this. From here I'm gonna push my knee in, lift it up, put my foot onto his hip. When he pushes down to escape this he can because he's now pushing against his own body. I'm not gonna go for the inside but from the outside. Arm in, turn, from here scorpion lock is presenting itself and now I turn into him. I'm not going straight like this. I'm turning into him to get the tap. This is the shoulder thingy. This is a shoulder lock from here right. So same as Americana. This is a shoulder thing. It pops his shoulder. Alright guys so this was the final part. This was the scorpion deadlock.