All right, so next submission we're going to go over is going to be the Peruvian necktie. Okay, so just we'll go over like fundamentals and like what it is first. It's going to be we're under the neck, under the head, same as like we're the darts kind of, but from this like turtle position. All right, we connect our hands in the like no thumb gable grip, called the vice grip here, once again. And then we're gonna, there's different ways to like get into it, but for right now, just showing you what it is, it's going to be both your legs over their back, and then you're going to pull this grip into your body. All right, and you're extending your legs and you're getting the finish that way. Okay, so this is just, there's like a lot of different ways to get into it, but this is just the finishing position. All right, one leg over her back, one on her head. This is kind of pushing down. This is also kind of driving down and you're pulling the grip into you, but also pushing your legs away. Okay, so it's like a two for one here. All right, we'll get into finishes and setups and everything right now, but for right now, just so you know what the peruvian necktie is, just like a submission from the vice grip, but like I said, we're going to finishes and setups right now. you
