So for this one I will shoot him, boom, take the leg, that's important, I never follow him, I make him walk to me, so I grab the leg and make him come. If I grab and follow him, probably my opponent can do a takedown, so this is safe. I take him for me here, I make him walk too close to me. When I have this, my both arms here, I will use my other hand, boom, pass, pull, press with the shoulder, create a space, my arm goes under. Right now I can't just make a pressure here and spin him, so I use this leg to turn him to this way, so my head have to be tight and I will press him down over here. So one more time, I will shoot him, take for me, get in, make spin, slide full arm inside and now this leg will work, I will step out with this leg and my head and my body have to be like tight with him, I can't be far, always tight. Now I will spin and press him down, doesn't matter if he make this hook over here, if this happen, I just will break my hip, kick out and take him again, press with my elbow, if he try spin, I block him with my hand over here and climb to press him and stop on the side control. So one more time, we are here, I grab, pass, slide arm and now I will spin with this one, so I will spin to this way, I will open and spin him, press him on the floor here. If this happen, soon that I have this, my knee go under like here, I'll put my hip on the floor, kick this out and turn back again. So if he have my leg over here, my knee come close, step out and I put my both knees on the mat again. Last time, dig him, full arm, spin him, pass in, now being tight and twist. Soon that I have this, if the hook are like here on my knee, inside, push out, get tight. Here, control him to stay on the mat and climb.
