All right, guys, so now I'm gonna use the same scape for the previous one, okay? But at this time, I'm gonna have, instead of like I just put him back in the guard, I'm gonna have the option to counterattack, okay? So I'm gonna have the opportunity to see that as soon as I apply the technical stand-up, and then I'm gonna go right away on the attack, okay? So basically, it's like that. I'm gonna be here again, he has the knee on belly, protect myself over here first, okay? Now I'm gonna go over here, as soon as I see that guy has the belt on, I'm gonna grab the belt with my forehand, okay? Grab one, now I'm gonna push the guy's hips to put him out of balance and shrink it out, okay? Look at that. Now I'm gonna be able to bring my elbow on the mat and keep the guy away. As I apply the technical stand-up, bringing my right knee back, my right hand over here is gonna catch his ankle over there. And I'll push the guy's hips forward, okay? So one more time. So if I don't have the opportunity to grab the ankle, I just play guard again, right? So first off, I'm gonna protect over here, boom, and then I'm gonna cross and grab the belt. Look at that. Put my hand in the middle of his hips over here, like fisted, right? Now my other hand goes here, but I'm not grabbing anything with my right hand, okay? So now is the time that as I'm pushing his hips away, I'm gonna shrink it out, okay? And keep my left arm that I'm grabbing his belt very stiff. Okay, I'm gonna push and shrink it out. Now I come up, bring my leg back, and go right away to the ankle, and end up like so.
