Alright guys, now I'm going to show you a different reaction, actually the common reaction. So whenever you have the loss of guard, the most common thing that the person on top is going to do is start to walk sideways, you know, to try to avoid your position. And now today we're going to learn how to you avoid his start to walk to the side. You gotta always be one step ahead of your opponent, that way you can avoid his movement before he starts to do it. And it's really important you know all the reactions, because whenever you drew the position it's different whenever you're rolling, whenever you're competing, because the person who's on top is always going to give you a reaction, and they're always going to give you different reactions. That's why it's very important you be aware about the reactions, ok? So we're going to do the same thing, ok, the engagement. Whenever I go to the lasso and then I start to come back to my hip, it's really common the person on top starts to walk to the side, you know, to always make me sideways, and that way, look at my hip, it's already on the side. We talked about this before, I can't let my hip on the side, so I gotta be aware whenever he starts to walk to break his grip, and all the time my foot goes to the mat, and I start to move my hip sideways, ok? And now as I break this grip, it's really important the control of both sleeves, so whenever I'm here he starts to walk, foot on the ground, and move, and then I keep moving and now I can engage the Dela Riva, so now I'm on my circuit zone, ok, again, I'm here, I start to engage the lasso, whenever I come back, he's going to start to walk, look, at the same time, my leg stops him to walk, ok, whenever my foot is on the ground, my thigh, look, blocks his leg, and then, yes, I can start to walk, and walk, and engage the Dela Riva, ok? And also, why it's really good and important the Dela Riva, because sometimes, whenever I walk, he's going to try to step back, step back, yes, you know, to try to step over my lasso, and the Dela Riva is good to bring him close to me, ok, because Jiu Jitsu is about connection, I always got to be connected with my opponent, because if I don't have connection, then probably I don't have a good control, I don't have attacks, ok, Jiu Jitsu means connection, you got to be always connected with your partner, so again, it's two things that can happen, ok, whenever I'm in here, he can start to walk back, ok, if he start to walk back, look at the distance between me and him, my hips, how I'm going to attack from here, will be really hard, that's why, foot on the ground, start to move my hip, and engage the Dela Riva, ok, and also, what can happen, whenever I move my hip sideways, he try all the time to step back, to pass over my lasso leg, ok, and that way, from here I can use my hook, ok, my Dela Riva hook, to bring him close to me, I'm going to do one more side, and that way you guys can see all the details, ok, whenever I engage the lasso, I'm going to start to walk sideways, I break and I stop, he walk right away with my leg, ok, you see whenever I start to walk with my foot on the ground, I stop him to walk because my leg is avoiding him to step sideways, whenever he try to step sideways, he can't, what he can try to do is step over my leg, but whenever he goes, I keep walk, always follow him, ok, and I can engage the Dela Riva, my security position, ok, let me do just, I did all the angles, actually, so, I hope you guys enjoy the position, Osu!
