Guys, we have to make something very simple and easy, so when you're in a really tough situation that the guy might really go for, and the guy is a really good, he's not just gonna try, he has a very good choke, and he's gonna really put you there, you always make the right decision. So the point is, I'm on the knee, and I'm gonna try, instead of pull guard, I'm gonna try to take him down. I don't have to pull guard if I have a good takedown, so it doesn't help if I just take him down, I'm just gonna put myself on the guillotine, so if I take him down, I have to know where to go, left or right. So I have my arm inside, I'm gonna take him down. Watch this, guys. I'm gonna take him down, I'm gonna drive him to the side that I want. I have to move him, if I'm taking him down, I'm taking him to where I want, I don't wanna just kind of, he's giving the takedown, that's not good. He's falling, so let me just, one more time, let me just kind of, oh, I'm going, he's falling, I'm going. Yeah, you're going, you're taking him down, but now you're in a big trouble. So if I'm gonna take him down, I have to pick him and go where I have to go, to don't tap, to establish the side control, right? So same thing, same thing, if I'm gonna take him down, I don't really like to open my neck, even if I'm going towards the right side, I still feel kind of a little bit like scared to open my neck. I'll tuck, I'll tuck in, I'll drive, and I will stay here. And I'm on the same side that we were looking before, towards the side that you have your arm, towards the side that you have your arm inside the choke, right? In case he doesn't want you taking him down, he doesn't wait till you're taking him down, he pulls guard. So he pulls guard, he pulls guard with the choke towards the side that he wants. He's never, someone that has a bad control, he's never gonna pull guard towards the side that you pass his guard, right? So I'm over here, he pulls guard. As soon as I pull guard, I jump his guard. He probably is not gonna give the good side in, so you have to pass his guard. You have to use your hands and pass his guard. So this time, guys, finish the takedown and go towards the right side. If he doesn't push a pull guard, you go towards the right side. Let's make it easy so everybody kind of like a, don't mix anything. Let's try this.
