Metadata: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=dT9JJ0g6CtY

Another option here from side mount is the leg nelson. You'll understand why it's called the leg nelson as soon as you see it. Side control. I'm going to pass his arm and his head by. Scoop and feed my leg all the way to his far armpit. Now to do that I might need to use my other leg to fish that foot in. Toes up in the armpit. Scooting and then trying to lever his neck down into his own chest. It also helps to hold on to his arm so he's got less ways to maneuver. Get that leg nelson. Rotate up, if you want to get full fancy you roll all the way through. Lock your arms and get under his elbow joint here. Now from here you're pulling on this but the main emphasis is driving the head down still. Driving it towards his head. Whoo on your back. Now one might say if I'm here why not just go for the figure four. Well let's imagine that his arm did get in between the two. Right so if his arm got past yeah I'm going right into my figure four. If his arm stays in front of my leg I'll use it to feed this arm to this leg through. Now you could go and attack an arm lock. It's a great hold position or you can go for a kingpin finish. And crank it out knee and my ribs.